01 / A useful first screen

Search and scope are quiet. Setup gaps lead directly to fixes; the library never equates a draft with an active workflow.

02 / One approval vocabulary

Every row shows a readable route and its source: company default, shared workflow or custom for one scheme.

03 / A truthful catalogue

Future processes may be drafted, but Publish stays unavailable until their business-object adapter is connected.

Build a route anyone can read.

Four guided steps, plain-language cards and a live example replace a technical flowchart canvas.

Why this route?

01 / Understand before configuring

The live sentence explains the entire route. Submitted by is separate from the steps that approve the request.

02 / People without duplication

Manager and role choices resolve in context. Change the HR lead centrally; new requests use the new person.

03 / Preview, then coverage

One passing example is useful, but publication also checks the full scope for missing people and conflicts.

Manage people & backups

01 / Default to roles and managers

Use the employee's manager for hours. Use company/division HR or Finance roles for payroll batches.

02 / Named users remain available

Use specific people for fixed signatories or backups. A name choice never grants permission or creates an account.

03 / Established enterprise pattern

SAP supports role, team and user assignment; Microsoft documents manager routing. Sources and design rationale are in handover section 7.1.

Behavior contract: APPROVAL_WORKFLOWS_DESIGN_HANDOVER.md

Approval setup belongs inside the scheme.

Replace the existing informational card in Blueprint Connect, step 3 of 6, with a real workflow binding.

01 / Exact reconciliation

The existing six-step journey stays intact. Remove the old “already in place / coming later” behavior and derive real readiness.

02 / Two different decisions

Approving changes to a scheme is distinct from approving a payroll run calculated with that scheme.

03 / One editor, many entry points

Connect, scheme Settings and the central workspace use the same summary, binding selector and builder.

Shared when useful. Different where necessary.

A scheme can follow division defaults, choose a shared workflow, or keep a clear local variation.

Payroll run approval

Retail monthly / Vietnam / 2 divisions

Use the default for each division

Each division keeps its own responsibilities and approval route.

Use a shared workflow

One route structure, with people resolved for each division.

Customize for this scheme

Start from a route, then tailor the steps for this scheme.

Exceptions for a division

Retail

HR + Finance, everyone must approve

Retail

Nithya + Monica

Joint approval / both people required

Operations

Operations HR > Operations Finance

Uses the scheme-wide route

This variation is visible centrally. Other schemes keep their existing workflow.

Save selection

01 / Always show the source

Inherited, shared and custom are explicit states. “Change” never quietly edits every scheme that uses a shared definition.

02 / Scope has a fixed order

Scheme + division, then scheme, then division, then company. Exact run kind wins within a level.

03 / Keep batches unambiguous

Mixed approval scopes are detected before submission. Version one offers a reviewed split into homogeneous pay runs.

The decision is marked in the audit trail.

Joint approval still requires distinct people.

01 / Calendar-aware deadlines

Show a calculated local timestamp in preview. “Day 15” needs a calendar, cut-off time and non-working-day rule.

02 / Your confirmed preference

Payroll may allow selected self-approval exceptions. Configure the scope, eligible people, steps and reason requirement.

03 / Preserve what approval means

The exception does not grant access, bypass evidence or let one person satisfy two required joint seats.

Current task first, readable evidence links, full-width action. Long names wrap and the footer never covers content.

02 / Exceptions leave evidence

An eligible self-approver must give a transaction-specific reason; the request receives a visible exception badge.

03 / Joint approvals stay joint

One actor cannot count twice. Completed decisions remain visible, with the remaining person clearly identified.

Keep this draft

All your steps and selections are saved.

2

Recheck the scope

3

Publish when ready

Current permissions and exceptions are checked again.

01 / Different problems, different fixes

Missing people, missing permissions, conflicting rules and unsupported sources are separate issues with stable error codes.

02 / No invented fallback

A missing manager never turns into approval by every HR user. Only explicitly configured backups may qualify.

03 / No loss of work

The repair returns to the same draft, step and preview context. Coverage is revalidated before publishing.

The experience is simple. The contract is precise.

Implementation map: preserve existing approvals while introducing a shared, versioned engine and domain adapters.

01 / Source grounded

The workbook has ten processes, not ten steps. Preserve unresolved reviewer identities, calendars and bank mandates as setup questions.

02 / Read the companion contract

The Markdown handover defines selection, data models, adapters, migration, 41 acceptance cases and a next-session prompt.

03 / Documentation delivery

These screens are static design artifacts. Implementation must commit, deploy the combined state, test in Chrome and remove test screenshots.
